WEEKLY MESSAGE FROM PRINCIPAL MAROHN

I have a confession to make. I am a huge nerd. My family and students would probably attest to that. There are parts of my life that are relatively normal. I love the outdoors. I enjoy hunting, fishing, and spending time in the woods or on the lake. I enjoy watching my kids' sports and all things WI sports (Packers, Brewers, Bucks, and Badgers). I really like to grill (charcoal only- don't get me started on gas) and smoke meat. I am a pretty normal guy.

However, there is also my inner nerd. I have a secret passion that brings me so much joy. I thoroughly enjoy studying investing and personal finance. Every morning, I wake up at 5am, take a shower, get a cup of coffee, do my Bible study, and then grab an investing book. I have literally read hundreds of books to learn more about stocks, bonds, ETFs, mutual funds, economics, and the list goes on and on. Every night, I grab my laptop or phone and study stocks. While others scroll social media or watch TV, I am researching companies and reading investing articles. Nothing is more exciting to me than analyzing a company's financials, including its PE ratios, revenue, earnings, sales, beta, EBITDA, EPS, dividend yields, and 52-week highs and lows, all of which inform my next investment decision. My wife's eyes glaze over and then roll into the back of her head when I talk to her about these exciting topics. I cannot understand why she isn't as interested as I am. Yep, I am a nerd.

How about you? What do you find interesting and exciting in life? What are you absolutely passionate about? These are things that consume a significant portion of our time and energy. The relentless pursuit of these passions can become overly consuming and distract us from other priorities.

Oftentimes, we ensure our children share the same passions and teach them to prioritize these things. For example, we want our children to have an excellent education for a successful future. Or perhaps we want them to excel in athletics, so we encourage them to participate in school, club teams, and other activities. We dedicate our time on evenings and weekends to practices, games, and tournaments so that they can play at the next level. These blessings from God can actually become distractions and take us away from what is most important.
